Tourist Travel Up 10 Per Cent In Virginia Over Last Year

Richmond.- Tourist travel in Virginia during the State's 350th Anniversary year is running more than 10 per cent ahead of last year, according to a mid-season survey conducted by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce of over 500 sources.

Estimates from managers of Virginia resorts, historic shrines and local chambers of commerce showed the number of visitors at individual locations so far is ranging from 2 to 30 per cent higher than 1956's all-time recordr travel figures.

The majority of travel trade representatives, however, put their gains at something between 10 and 15 per cent better than last year. The State Chamber's annual survey of tourist trends last year showed the 1956 season topped 1955 by about 12 per cent.

Primary reasons cited for the increase were the Jamestown Festival, better promotion and advertising, and a generally recognized national trend toward more travel.

The Jamestown Festival, itself—Virginia's major 1957 attraction—has been visited by more than half a million persons already, and several other big travel drawing cards, including visits by President Eisenhower and Queen Elizabeth, are yet to come.

At the end of July, 642,463 persons had visited the Festival Park at Jamestown, according to Colonel H. K. Roberts, administrative director of the Jamestown - Williamsburg - Yorktown National Celebration Commission.

Weekly attendance figures at the Festival area in late July showed more than 52,000 guests each week —an average of better than 7,500 visitors daily. The Festival opened in April and will continue through November.

Traffic eastbound on U. S. Route 60 from Richmond to Williamsburg is up 60 per cent, Roberts said, and on several days, the park area was visited by more than 50 school buses bearing youthful visitors.

These figures, of course, meant business for other Virginians.

The manager of a new motel, with more than 200 rooms in Williamsburg, said he could have filled another 100 rooms each night since Easter.

From other facilities, too, the Festival received credit for increasing travel and trade. The others included reports from representatives of several eastern counties, not generally considered tourist attractions.

But all the questionnairs comments did not contain praise.

A spokesman for one of the Shenanhoah Valley caverns attributed his 10 per cent in business this year to better promotion and declared the "Festival has not been helpful—in fact it has distracted." Yet, this same spokesman reported last year as his best in history. A Roanoke hotelman observed, too, that his trade this summer "has been adversely affected by the Jamestown pull (of travel) to the east."

In Richmond, where the number of out-of-town convention delegates is more than 6,000 ahead of the same time a year ago, disappointment has been expressed by local chamber of commerce officials because an expected overflow crowd needing hotel and motel facilities" have not underalized. Early promotion of the Festival, which may have helped win some conventions to Richmond, was credited with helping the city this year.

The Festival won some credit and also some blame for an estimated 4.5 per cent increase in the number of visitors to The Mariners Museum at Warwick.

Harold S. Souffen, assistant director of the museum, credited the gain to improvements in the museum; the Festival, especially the International Naval Review, which brought 8,000 foreign sailors to the mesuem, and a general increases in travel.

But, he added, attendance during April and May, fell below 1956 figures, because bus tours, carrying school groups, often passed by the museum in order to have more time available to inspect the Jamestown Festival Park.

More than 2,000,000 visitors have ridden the Blue Ridge Parkway this year, despite a prolonged rainy season during May and June, according to Howard B. Stricklin, acting superintendent.

Stricklin said the number of Parkway visitors this year is 2.8 per cent higher than last year, an all-time record season.

The Skyline Drive, which runs south from the Parkway along the Blue Ridge mountains, thus far this year has experienced a 5.87 per cent increase over 1956, according to William L. Featherstone, assistant chief park ranger.

The increase, Featherstone said, may be attributed to "an appreciable increase in travel" during January and February.

Mount Vernon, George Washington's home, which annually draws visitors by the millions, at the end of June was running 20,000 persons ahead of the count made at the same time last year.

From several parts of the state came reports by hotel men, who reported better times this year, but some complained that motor courts and higher costs are cutting into their businesses. What gains the hotel men reported — and some ran as high as 30 per cent — are due primarily to increased advertising.

One hotel operator from Southwest Virginia, suggested the state should increase its appropriation for advertising to help bring more visitors to Virginia. Another suggested promotion of a winter travel season.

Another reason, cited by several persons, for increased numbers of Virginia tourists is interest in battlefields of the War Between the States.

a British Admiral, Sir Francis Beaufort. It is still the system used by most weather officials.

The Beaufort numbers begin with 1, which is a one to three knot wind, and continue up to 12, which is a wind above 65 knots in velocity. A wind af Beaufort number 8, for example, is a fresh gale with winds up to 40 knots. Number 4 means moderate wind between 11 and 16 knots.

The Beaufort arrow, used on weather maps and charts, denotes the velocity of wind according to the number of barbs attached. A circle which represents the head of the arrow indicates clear or cloudy weather. If the inside of the small circle is clear, the weather is clear; if it is half blacked in, the sky is partly cloudy, etc.

FIRST LANDING
NEAR HERE THE FIRST PERMANENT ENGLISH SETTLERS IN NORTH AMERICA FIRST LANDED ON AMERICAN SOIL APRIL 26, 1607. FROM HERE THEY WENT ON TO MAKE THE SETTLEMENT AT JAMESTOWN.

the example of Jamestown

"every man his own hearthstone . . ."

When John Smith returned to England in September, 1609, he left at Jamestown 500 colonists — vigorous, well-fed, housed, and well-armed.

Yet just eight months later, when Lord Delaware crossed from England and sailed into the James River, he found far downstream from the settlement all that remained alive — about sixty wretched, emaciated, half-naked men, women, and children . . . "most miserable and poor creatures."

Disorganized by corrupt leadership, weakened by greed and rebellion . . . the other four hundred and forty had perished — some by the Indian hatchet, but most by starvation in a land of plenty!

Delaware re-established order, set work rules for the colonists, and brought back a respect for religion. When ill health forced him to return to England several months later, Sir Thomas Dale became Governor. Dale immediately thrust out the socialistic system which forbade the colonists to own homes and land and also compelled them to bring to a common storehouse all they produced. Now, "every man was to have his own hearthstone and his own private tract which he was to cultivate himself." With this new freedom . . . with this new right of the individual to own, benefit and prosper directly in proportion to his individual labors, Jamestown began to flourish. For the first time, the colony was economically self-sufficient; for the first time, there was surplus instead of deficiency.

The example of Jamestown is one men learn again every time they attempt to work and live without free enterprise . . . without giving every individual the incentive of personal recognition of and reward for the accomplishments which come from his hands, his head and his heart. This is the freedom which has made the United States the most productive nation in history. This is the American Way.
